

3 tips how to become charismatic

Charisma is the most important quality to attract girls. With charisma you can call others a sense of admiration, respect, etc. in other words, charisma is self-confidence. How is this confidence to develop?

More to communicate with strangers

With your friends you communicate often, you have common topics of conversation, common interests, but what about with strangers? With a stranger you have no common interests or topics of conversation, so in dealing with him, you're out of your comfort zone. Often communicating with strangers, you will become more confident.

I suggest you perform a simple exercise. Your task is to go out and just approach any person and ask him any question. The issue can be any (adequate). For example, you can ask what time it is or how to get to some places. A few times doing this exercise, you will become more confident and can proceed to the second part.

Your task is to communicate with strangers. But what excuse to approach them? After all, you can't just walk up and say, "let's have a chat?". Well, to be honest, some people can still not start a conversation, but this is not about them. I recommend you to visit some event. Let's take the example of a football match. Imagine that you come to the match, what you should do? Just pick the person with whom you want to chat, come and ask what the outcome of the previous game and what place the team that you support. Suppose you said, "Lost 0: 2". Options for how to continue the dialogue mass, you can jokingly say "Again, we're being sued?", further develop dialogue.

To do this exercise, not necessarily to go to the football, you can go to a concert or some event, but it can be done on the streets. Come to somebody and talk about what's best to give mom, grandma, girlfriend (in this case, it is not necessary that you had a girl). Having done this exercise, you'll see how you've changed for the better.

More speak in front of an audience

To pump your charisma and confidence, you need more to get out of the comfort zone. Speaking to the audience you're nervous, but it helps you to improve charisma. But where and to whom to speak?

If you are student, then I recommend you often to take reports and presentations. It will be doubly useful. First: it is encouraged a good level, and second, you will develop the skills of charisma, but remember. The first, second or maybe third time, you can try as soon as possible to read his report, but then, you should try to tell your peers that it was interesting. Not to read, namely to tell.

Try to find his classmates a special approach, here is a small example. At my school all the teachers explain the theme of their items, but how do they do it? Yes, it's not monotone, but still no special Hobbies. But one day we received a student from the Institute, he talked about the Institute and the professions. He did this so that the whole class, without exception, listened and asked questions, everyone was interested. Yeah, maybe it has affected and age, younger teachers, and generally the younger the person, the easier it is to find a common language with the teenagers, but the same age is not enough. I hope you get the point.

Look at their field of work

Look at the scope of your activities, think about how you can pump charisma? Will give the example of sales managers, Yes these are the same people who keep calling you on the phone and offer to buy anything. How often do you listen to their suggestions? I mean, listen with interest, and not due to the fact that they got you so you want them to have wasted time.

I often happens: I call the Manager appears and begins to offer their services, I even say except "Hello", don't have time essay writing service reviews. Well, it seems that for the Manager everything is OK, the client does not manage to say anything, and then not be able to refuse service. It is even so that when the client starts to say anything, the Manager just ignores it.

What happens next? Correctly, the customer hangs up. Sales managers every day have the opportunity to pump the skills of charisma, the same can be and with teachers. Now, think about how you can pump charisma and become more confident in your field, don't miss this opportunity!

So, in this article I give you 3 tips on pumping charisma and confidence. Definitely try to apply at least 1 of these tips into practice and I guarantee you the improvement of your communication skills!